

Joseph Scavo

Mayor: March 2001-July 2001
Born: Feb. 23, 1934
Died: July 21, 2001

A community leader who adopted Hallandale Beach in 1990, he believed in Community Service and the preservation of the safety of residents and public servants.

Joseph Scavo devoted his life to protecting the rights of residents and the community. A retired New York City Police Detective, Mr. Scavo served 25 years on the streets of New York before making Hallandale Beach his home. Upon his move, he became active in the City and was elected president of the DeSoto Park South Condominium Association. He was active in the creation of the Three Islands Safe Neighborhood District in 1993 and served as its chairman in 1997. Mr. Scavo was a leader on the Three Islands Council of Condominiums.

Drawing on his career, Mr. Scavo was an outspoken advocate for police safety. When he learned Hallandale Beach Police Officers were using a myriad of different handguns, he championed efforts to standardize police radios and weapons, among other equipment. Mr. Scavo convinced other City leaders that ammunition would be interchangeable and increase officer safety.

Elected to the City Commission in 1999, Mr. Scavo was elected Mayor in 2001. Mr. Scavo became ill in March 2001, the day before his swearing in. Mr. Scavo was so well respected in the City that he retained the title of Mayor until his death in July 2001. Because of his efforts, City Commissioners unanimously honored him on August 21, 2001 by renaming Three Islands Park to Joseph Scavo Park.
